LOOK OUT FOR MRS. CRANE

Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane of Kalamazoo, Michigan, begins her campaign today in the western part of the state. She comes to Kentucky at the invitation of Berea College, the Women's Clubs, and the State Board of Health, and is to be in Berea Saturday, Sunday and Monday, Her specialty is healthful living in home, village and city. She has made her own city of Kalamazoo the cleanest and the healthiest in the United States.

She will speak in Berea to an invited gathering of ladies at the President's house Saturday afternoon, and in the College Chapel Sunday night and Monday morning.

What she has to say will be of interest because she is a good speaker, and still more because she has something very important to tell us.

Quite a full account of Mrs. Crane and her work is given in the last number of the Delineator, and in a recent number of the Circle.

It would be a good thing if all our premises could be "picked up" before Mrs. Crane gets here!

ESSENTIALS OF SUCCESS.

This editorial is not written for those who have accomplished all they want to in the world, and if you, gentle reader, are one of those, and have attained all the success you think is good for you, or do not want to get anything beyond what you have, it will not pay you to read this.

Having eliminated all of this class of people, we are at liberty to express our opinion of them. The man who has done all that he hopes to in this world, or who has no further ambition, is thru with his work. He is dead for all the good he can do, and the sooner he is buried the less good victuals will be wasted.

For the rest of us; for us who still hope to do some things and attain some successes which we have not reached, it is worth while occasionally to stop and think over the ways we are taking to reach those hoped-for results. If we are getting toward our desires, then the review will be pleasant-if we are not, it will at least be useful, and we can start on with better chance of winning.

It is a melancholy fact that very few people in this world ever attain "success." Nearly ninety five out of every hundred business ventures fail, and it is likely that about the same proportion of all attempts in any other direction miscarry. Many things are more or less to blame. Some men set their mark too high; some do not sufficiently calculate the difficulties; some choose unworthy ends, and meet up with Providence. But there is one general reason, which accounts for more failures than all the rest put together. And that is lack of perseverance.

Great men have had all kinds of qualities. They have done all kinds of things in all kinds of ways, and at first sight it would seem as if there was no one thing which they all did and on which they all built their success. But there is- and that one thing is perseverance. Every man who has won any great success (this does not count men who have found gold mines, or had any other extraordinary good fortune but men who have won success) every such man has been notable for his doggedness and persistence of purpose, and it is fair to say that without these qualities no success worth anything can be won.

Success is like anything else in this world—it has to be worked out. No man can cut a very big tree with one stroke of his ax, no matter how strong he is. No woman makes a baking of biscuits with one stir of her spoon, no matter how clever a cook she may be. The weak man who hits the big tree a good many licks, one right after the other, and the ordinary woman who keeps on stirring, will win their object a good deal sooner than the strong one lick fellow or one stir woman. The tree is not cut, nor are the biscuits made, by one brilliant action, nor even by knowing how, nor by strength, but just by keeping everlastingly at it. The other things help, but they are only good when added to perseverance.

A young fellow—and some times an old one, too—will often quit in discouragement because his first, hard effort has not taken him all the way to the top. He seems to feel that, having shown brilliancy and a little real hard work, success ought to come to him. He gets tired before he even hits the second lick.

How many of us have done that? It is a great temptation to say there is no use, and quit, after a little trial. It is easy to find an excuse, and leave the tiresome repetition to the other fellow. But, those of us who do keep right on hitting, and who do repeat, and repeat again, will finally cut our successes out of life. And no one, no matter how brilliant or strong, will get it unless he takes off his coat and goes to work steadily like the rest of us.

There is no better thought for a young man than this of Bill Nye's:- "My son, consider the postage stamp, how it accomplishes its object in life by sticking to one thing until it gets there." Put a little stickum on your back.

OGTAVE THANET THE MAN & BOHOURS

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens at Harvard where Col. Rupert Winter, U. S. A., visiting, saw the suicide of young Mercer. He met Cary Mercer, brother of the dead student. Three years later, in Chicago, in 1906, Col. Winter overheard Cary Mercer apparently planning to kidnap Archie, the colonel's ward, and to gain possession of Aunt Rebecca Winter's millions. A Miss Smith was mentioned, apparently as a conspirator. Winter unexpectedly met a relative, Mrs. Millicent Melville, who told him that his Aunt Rebecca, Archie and the latter's nurse, Miss Janet Smith, were to leave for the west with the colonel and Mrs. Melville. A great financial magnate was aboard the train on which Col. Winter met his Aunt Rebecca, Miss Smith and Archie. He set his orderly, Sergt. Haley, to watch over Cary Mercer. Col. Winter learned that the financial magnate is Edwin S. Keatcham. On approaching Cary Mercer, the colonel was snubbed. Winter, aided by Archie, cleverly frustrated a hold-up on the train. He took a great liking to Miss Smith, despite her alleged connection with the kidnaping plot, which he had not yet revealed to his relatives. The party arrived in San Francisco. It was thought that there were big persons behind the hold-up gang. Archie mysteriously disappeared.

CHAPTER V. Blind Clews.

"But this is preposterous," cried Mrs. Melville, "you must have seen him had he come out of the room; you were directly in front of the doors all the time."

"I was," admitted the colonel; "can -can the boy be hiding to scare us?" He spoke to Miss Smith. She had grown pale; he did not know that his own color had turned. Millicent stared from one to the other.

"How ridiculous!" she exclaimed; "of course not; but he must be some where; let me look!"

Look as they might through all the staring empty rooms, there was no vestige of the boy. He was as clean vanished as if he had fallen out of the closed and locked windows. The colonel examined them all; had there been one open, he would have peered outside, frightened as he had never been when death was at his elbow. But it certainly wasn't possible to jump through a window, and not only shut, but lock it after one.

Under every bed, in every closet, he prowled; he was searching still when Mrs. Winter returned. By this time Mrs. Melville was agitated, and, naturunpardonable in Archie to sneak out in this fashion," she complained.

"I suppose the boy wanted to see the town a bit," observed Aunt Rebecca, placidly. "Rupert, come in and sit down; he will be back in a moment; smoke a cigar, if your nerves need calming." Rupert felt as if he were a boy of ten, called back to common sense out of imaginary horrors of the dark.

"But, if he wanted to go out, why him?" asked Miss Smith

"He may be only exploring the hotel," said Mrs. Winter. "Don't be so restless, Bertie; sit down."

The colonel's eye was furtively photographing every article of furniture in the room; it lingered longest on Mrs. Winter's wardrobe trunk, which was standing in her room. Randall had been dispatched for a hot-water bottle in lieu of one which had sprung a leak on the train; so the trunk stood, its door ajar. "Maybe he is doing the Genevra stunt there-is that what you are thinking?" she jeered. "Well, go and

Light as her tone was, she was not unaffected by the contagion of anxiety about her; after a moment, while Rupert was looking at the wardrobe trunk, and even profanely exploring the swathed gowns held in rigid safety by bands of rubber, she moved about the rooms herself.

"There isn't room for a mouse in that box," growled the colonel.

"Of course not," said his languidly, sinking into the easiest chair; "but your mind is easier. Archie will come back for dinner; don't worry."

"How could he get by me?" retorted the colonel.

"Perhaps he went into the neighboring rooms," Miss Smith suggested. "Shall I go out and rap on the door of the next room on the left?" On the right the last room of the party was a corner room.

"Why, you might," acquiesced Aunt Rebecca; but Mrs. Melville cut the ends of her words

"Pray let me go, Aunt Rebecca," she begged, suiting the action to the words, and was out of the door almost ahead of her sentence.

The others waited; they were silent; little flecks of color raddled Mrs. Winter's cheeks. They could hear En'icent's knock reverberating. The was no answer. "Telephone to the adjacent room," proposed the cctonel.

"I'll telephone," said Mrs. Winter. and rang up the number of the next room. There was no response; but when she called the number of the room adjoining, she seemed to get an answer, for sic announced her name. "Have you seer a young lad?" she continued, after an apology for disturbing color, saying: "They might be a little civiler in their answers, if it is Mr. Keatcham's suite."

"What did the beggar say?" bristled the colonel.

"Only that it was Mr. Keatcham's suite-Mr. E. S. Keatcham-as if that put getting into it quite out of the question. Some underling, I presume." "There is the unoccupied room between. That is not accounted for. But it shall be. I will find out who is in there." Rupert rose as he spoke, pricked by the craving for action of a man accustomed to quick decision. He heard his aunt brusquely repelling Millicent's proposal of the police, as he left the room. Indeed, she called him back to exact a promise that he would not make Archie's disappearance public. "We want to find him," was her grim addendum; "and we can't have the police and the newspapers hindering us."

In the office he found external courtesy and a rather perfunctory sympathy, based on a suppressed, but perfectly visible conviction that the boy had stolen out for a glimpse of the city, and would be back shortly.

The manager had no objection to telling Col. Winter, whom he knew slightly, that the occupant of the next room was a New England lady of the highest respectability, Mrs. Winthrop Wigglesworth. If the young fellow didn't turn up for dinner, he should be glad to ask Mrs. Wigglesworth to let Mrs. Winter examine her room; but he rather thought they would be seeing young Winter before then-oh, his hat? They usually carried caps in their pockets; and as to coatsboys never thought of their coats.

The manager's cheeriness did not especially uplift the colonel. He warmed it over dutifully, however, for his womankind's benefit. Miss Smith had gone out; why, he was not told, and did not venture to ask. Mrs. Melville kept making cautious signals to him behind his aunt's back; otherwise she was preserving the mien of sympathetic solemnity which she was used to show at funerals and first visits of condolence and congratulation to divorced friends. Mrs. Winter, as usual, wore ally, irritated as well. "I think it is an inscrutable composure. She was still firmly opposed to calling in the aid of the police.

Did she object to his making a few inquiries among the hotel bellboys, the elevator boy and the people in the restaurant or in the office?

Not at all, if he would be cautious. So he sallied out, and, in the midst of his fruitless inquisition, Millicent appeared.

Forcing a civil smile, he awaited her pleasure. "Go on, don't mind me," did be leave his hat and coat behind said she, mournfully; "you will feel ters; he made no acquaintances, back here to-night by ten, if you can, better to have done everything in your power."

"But I shall not discover anything?" "I fear not. Has it not occurred to you that he has been kidnaped?"

"Hmn!" said the colonel. "And did you notice how perturbed Miss Smith seemed? She was quite pale; her agitation was quite noticeable.

"She is tremendously fond Archie." "Oh-she knows more than she will say." "Oh, what rot!" sputtered the colonel; then he begged her pardon. "Wait." he counseled, and his man's fect, as masculine immobility always has, on the feminine effervescence before him. "Wait," was his word, "at least until we give the boy a chance to hotels or boarding places in San Franturn up; if he has slipped by us, he is taking a little pasear on his own account: lads do get restless sometimes if they are held too steadily in the tioned at the Presidio. Thanks to leash, especially-if you will excuse me-by, well, by ladies." "If he has frightened us out of our to be done to him!"

"Oh, well, let us wait and hear his story," repeated the soldier.

But the last streaks of red faded out of the west; a chill fog smoked up from the darkening hills, and Archie had not come. At eight, Mrs. Winter ordered dinner to be served in their rooms. Mrs. Smith had not returned. The colonel attempted a military cheerfulness, which his aunt told him bluntly, later in the evening, reminded her of a physician's manner in critical cases where the patient's mind must be kept absolutely quiet.

But she ate more than he at dinner; although her own record was not a very good one. Millicent avowed that she was too worried to eat, but she was tempted by the strawberries and carp, and wondered were the California fowls really so poor; and gave the sample the benefit of impartial and fair examination, in the end making a Indeed, absolutely the only matter of note (if that were one) was that he read so many newspapers -buying every different journal a cab and Haley heard him give the order: "To the St. Francis." Having his wife and child with him, the sergeant couldn't follow; but he went around to the St. Francis later, and inquired for Mr. Mercer, for whom he had a letter (as was indeed the case -the colonel having provided him with one), but no such name appeared on the register. Haley dismissed, and his own appetite for dinger effectually dispelled by his report, Winter joined his aunt. Should he tell Ber his suspicions and vended. At San Francisco he got into their ground? Wasn't he morally obliged, now, to tell her? She was co guardian with him of the boy, who, he had no doubt, had been spirited away by Mercer and his accomplice; and hadn't she a right to any information on the matter in 51s possession?

Reluctantly he admitted that she did have such a right; and, he ad mitted further, being a man who never cheated at solitaire, that his object in keening the talk of the two men from her had not been so much the desire to guard her nerves (which he knew perfectly well were of a robuster fiber than those of most women 20 or 40 years younger than she); no, he admitted it grimly, he had not so much spared his aunt as Janet Smith; he could not bear to direct suspicion toward her. But how could he keep stlent longer? Kicking this question about in his mind, he spotled the flavor of his after-dinner cigar, although his aunt graciously bade him smoke it in

And still Miss Smith had not re turned; really, it was only fair to her to have her present when he told his story to his aunt; no, he was not grabbing at any excuse for delay; if he could watch that girl's face while he told his story he would-well, he would have his mind settled one way or another.

Here the telephone bell rang; the manager informed Col. Winter that Mrs. Wigglesworth had reterned.

"Wigglesworth? What an extraor dinary name!" cried Millicent when the colonel shared his infortation.

"Good old New England name; l know some extremely nice Wigglesworths in Boston," Mrs. Winter amended with a touch of hauteur; and, at this moment, there came a knock

There is all the difference in the world between knocks; a knock as often as not conveys a most raintentional hint in regard to the character of the one behind the knuckles; and often, also, the mood of the knocker is reflected in the sound which he makes. Were there truth in this, one would judge that the person who knocked at this moment must be a woman for the knock was not loud, but almost timidly gentle; one might even gress that she was agitated, for the tapring was in a hurried, uneven measure.

A lady she was beyond doubt, and any one who had traveled would have been sure that she was a lady from Massachusetts. She wore that little close bonnet which certain elderly Boston gentlewomen can neither be driven nor allured to abandon; her rich and quiet black silken gown might have been made any year within the last five, and her furs would have graced a princess. She had beautiful gray hair and a soft complexion and wore glasses. Equally evident to the observer was the fact of her suppressed agitation.

She waved aside the colonel's proffered chair, introducing herself in a musical, almost tremulous voice with ly, but smiling. "Who has gone out?" the crisp enunciation of her section of the country. "I am Mrs. Wigglesworth; I understand, Col. Winteryou?-y-yes, po, thank you, I will not sit. I-I understand Mrs. Winter-ah. your aunt, is an elderly woman.'

"This is my sister-in-law, Mrs. Melville Winter," explained the colonel. "My aunt is elderly in years, but in nothing else.'

The colonel, in a few words, displayed the situation. He had prevailed upon his visitor to sit down, and while he spoke he noticed that her hands held each other tightly, although she appeared perfectly composed and did not interrupt. She answered his questions directly and quietly. She had been away taking tea with a friend; she had remained to dine. Her maid had gone out earlier to spend the day and night with a sister in the city; so the room was empty between six and seven o'clock.

"The chambermaid wasn't there, then?" "I don't think so. She usually does the room and brings the towels for the bath in the morning. It went under a rug, and I at once remarked that it was a different place for the rug to the one where it had been before. Before, it was in front of the dresser, a very natural place, but now it is on the carpet to one side, a place where there seemed no reason for its presence. These details seem trivial, but-"

"I can see they are not," said the colonel. "Pray proceed, madam. The ring had rolled under the rug!"

Mrs. Wigglesworth gave him a grateful nod.

"Yes, it had. And when I removed the rug I saw it; but as I bent to pick it up I saw something else. In one place there was a stain, as large as the palm of my hand, a little pool of-it looks like blood."

Mrs. Mellville uttered an exclamation of horror. The colonel's face stiffened; but there was no change in his polite attention.

"May we be permitted to see thisah, stain?" said he

The three stepped through the cor ridor to the outside door, and went into the chamber. The rug was flung to one side, and there on the gray velvet nap of the carpet was an irregular, sprawling stain about which were spattered other stains, some crimson, some almost black.

Millicent recoiled, shuddering. The colonel knelt down and examined the stains. "Yes," he said, very quietly, 'you are right, it is blood."

There was a tap on the door, which was opened immediately without waiting for a permission. Millicent, rigid with fright, could only stare helpless ly at the erect figure, the composed, pale face and the brilliant, imperious eyes of her aunt.

"What did you say, Bertie?" said Rebecca Winter. "I think I have a right to the whole truth."

CHAPTER VI.

The Voice in the Telephone. "Well, Bertie?" Mrs. Winter had gone back to her parlor in the most docile manner in the world. Her submission struck Rupert on the heart; it was as if she were stunned, he felt. He was sitting opposite her, his slender, rather short figure looking shrunken in the huge, ugly uphol-self; and at which he smiled forlornly, recalling the same pose in Haley whenever the sergeant was disconcerted.

"But, first," pursued his aunt, "who was that red-headed bellboy with whom you exchanged signals in the hall?"

The colonel suppressed a whistle.

"Aunt Becky, you're a wonder! Did you notice? And he simply shut the palm of his hand! Why, it's this way: I was convinced that Archie must be on the premises; he couldn't get off. So I telephoned a detective that I know here, a private agency, not the police, to send me a sure man to watch. He is made up as a bellboy (with the hotel manager's consent, of course); either I, or Milicent, or that boy has kept an eye on the Keatcham doors and the next room ever since I found Archie was gone. No one has gone out with our seeing him. If any suspicious person goes out, we have it arranged to detain him long enough for me to get a good look. I can tell you exactly who left the room."

"It is you who are the wonder, Bertie," said Aunt Rebecca, a little weari-"At seven Mr. Keatcham's secretary went down to the office and ordered dinner, very carefully. I didn't see him, but my sleuth did. He had the secretary and the valet of the Keatcham party pointed out to him; he saw them. They had one visitor, young Arnold, the Arnold's son-

"The one who has all the orange groves and railways? Yes, I knew his father.' "That one; he only came a few moments since. Mr. Keatcham and his secretary dined together, and Keatcham's own man waited on them; but the waiter for this floor brought up the dishes. At nine the dishes were brought out and my man helped Keatcham's valet to pile them a little farther down the corridor in the hall."

These items the colonel was reading out of his little red book. "You have put all that down. Do you think it means anything?" "I have put everything down. One can't weed until there is a crop of information, you know."

"True." murmured Aunt Rebecca, nodding her head, thoughtfully. "Well,

"The secretary posted a lot of let--but I have found something. At king now. Yes-" he was on his feet and at the door in almost a single mowas too late to catch it, but he could see the inmates. Three gentlemen stood in the car. One was Keatcham the other two had their backs to Win One seemed to be supporting Keatcham, who looked pale. He saw the colonel and darted at him a single glance in which was something like poignant appeal; what, it was too brief for the receiver to decide, for in the space of an eye blink a shoulder of the other man intervened, and simultaneously the elevator car began to sink

> There was need to decide instantly who should follow, who stay on guard. Rupert bade the boy go down by the stairs, while, with a kind of bulldog instinct, he clung to the rooms. The lad was to fetch the manager and the keys of the Keatcham suite. Meanwhile Rupert paced back and forth before the closed doors, whence there penetrated the rustle of packing and a murmur of voices. Presently Keatcham's valet opened the farther door. He spoke to some one inside. "Yes, sir," he said, "the porter hought to be 'ere now.' The porter was there; at least he was coming down the corridor which ied to the elevator, trundling his truck before him. He entered the rooms and busied himself about the luggage. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

London' Feeble-Minded Children There are 84 schools in London for the education of children who are not included under the extreme terms "idiots or imbeckles." but are "feebleminded and defective." They are attended by 6,000 children, of whom about two-thirds learn some useful manual work, while the rest are hopeless and require permanent custodial care.

Suggestion and Practical Thought. V. 1. "Certain men," perhaps those sent by James (Gal. 2: 12) "came down from Judea." The Bezan text says that these visitors were Pharisees, members of the strictest sect of the Jews. Perhaps they came to investigate rumors of laxity in the church; at any rate, they "taught the brethren" (the verb is in the imperfect, implying continued action,-they kept teaching), "and said, Except ye be circumcised . . . ye cannot be saved." "A very different doctrine from St. Paul's' 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved' (Acts 16:31)."-- Rackham.

The Importance of the Question .-The Christian church, during its first 20 years, had spread over Palestine, Phoenicia, Damascus, Antioch, Cyprus and South Galatia in Asia Minor. It was rapidly growing, especially among the Gentiles. The difference that had arisen set off against each other the two great centers of growth, Jerusa-Im and Antioch. It threatened to divide the Christian churches into two contending and irreconcilable factions. If that happened, it would probably be the deathblow to the young religion, the destruction of the hopes of the world through Christ. Could any matter be more momentous?

V. 2. "They ("the brethren," v. 1) determined that Paul and Barnabas, and certain other of them (including Titus, Gal. 2: 1, afterward Paul's companion, a Greek, a man of much ability, who would serve as a specimen of the Gentile converts), should go up to Jerusalem (300 miles away) about this question." Paul went "by revelation" (Gal. 2: 2), which is entirely consistent with the statement that the church sent him.

After much debate, that everyone might express his views, as is proper in a democratic assembly such as all Christian gatherings should be, Peter spoke up. His nearness to Christ and his strong character combined to make him a leader. Moreover, in this case he had had personal experience which placed him on Paul's side-the divine revelation bidding him go to the Gentile Cornellus, and the outpouring of the Spirit upon that convert and his household. It was precisely such witness to the right of the Gentiles to enter the church without circumcision as Paul himself described from his missionary experience. Peter insisted upon it with characteristic vigor, closing with the pointed question, "Why . . . put a yoke upon the neck of the (Gentile) disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?"-the yoke being the minute oppressive rites of Judaism, with the Pharisaic additions, imposed as a condition of salvation. There is only one condition of salvation, said Peter in conclusion,-"the grace (the free gift, unbought by any deed of ours) of the Lord Jesus Christ." As Peter sat down, Paul must have clapped his hands!

The decision embodied in a leter: (1) To clarify and unify judgment in the preparation of it; (2) to guard against slips of memory on the part of the envoys; (3) to prevent misunderstandings: (4) to preserve for future occasions the results of the conference. Capt. Cuttle's advice, "When found, make a note on," applies to all weighty matters.

The reasons for the restrictions: 1. The "pollutions of idols" (v. 20), explained as "meats offered to idols" (v. 29), came to be a sore trouble in the church, and liberty to eat such meat (the meat commonly sold had nearly all formed part of sacrifices) was at a later time claimed for Christians very strenuously by Paul. But until the Gentile churches were confirmed in their new separation from idelatry, it was wise to require them to abstain from whatever might tempt them with memories of the licentious revers which heathenism celebrated in the name of religion.

2. "Fornication," however, was the great sin of idolatry, which "glorified sexual vice with the halo of a sacred sanction."--Schaff. Courtezans were the priestesses of the temples of Venus, and crowds of abandoned women gathered around most of these socalled holy shrines. To this day, sexual immorality is the terrible sin of idolatry, as the missionary annals of Africa, India, China, Japan and the South seas most abundantly show.

2. "Things strangled," meant "the flesh of such animals as were killed in snares, and whose blood was not poured forth."-Gloag. The Jews were forbidden to eat these, as coming under the larger restriction that follows:

4. "Blood" was forbidden the Jews as an article of diet (Inductive Study 7) because blood was a symbol of life, which was to be held sacred, and of sacrifice, which was to be revered. It was the holy token of the remission of sin (Heb. 9: 22). Their most precious religious ideals urged the Jews to abstain from blood; but among the Gentiles it was, in various forms, a delicacy. To abstain from blood would be a little self-denial on the part of the Gentiles, while failure to do so would make it almost impossieat together.

The Puritan Collar. The high stiff linen collar has had its day, and with summer shirt waists will be worn soft stocks or the cool, pretty turned-down collars in Dutch or Puritan style. These collars are very easy to make, and, as the distinction of handmade neckwear is always recognized, a supply of turned-down collars should be made up at home. Fine linen lawn is the proper material to use, and the collar may be worked with heavy white dots, a dainty scalloping finishing the edge, or it may be trimmed with cluny or torckon lace. Sometimes there is merely a narrow lace edge with a little embroidered pattern above. Other pretty collars show an edge of the lace, with a narrow insertion running around an inch

DRINK AND TUBERCULOSIS.

The Excessive Use of Alcohol Makes Man Prone to Infectious Diseases.

A new light on the relation between drink and tuberculosis appears in a recent study of the reduction in the mortality from tuberculosis now discernible in the mortality figures of New York. An article by the registrar of records, department of health of the city of New York, in the New York Medical Record of November, 18, 1908, says: At every age group in both males and females the proportion of decrease is considerable, with the exception of the age group 45-55 in the males in which the reduction is only one per cent. The decrease is greater in all age groups among females than among males, with the exception of the ages under five and between 10 and 14; the reduction per cent. of the female mortality at all ages is 55, and that of the males only 29, slightly more than one-half that of the fe males. This is the more remarkable when we consider that of late years the female has taken up occupations classed as dangerous from an infec tious standpoint, such as typewriting, saleswoman, flower-making, featherworking, etc. Why should the rate from this cause of death be almost 50 per cent. lower in the female sex than in the male? Exposure to the elements on the part of the latter has been of fered as an explanation, and is true to some extent, as the death rate from pulmonary tuberculosis up to the twenty-fifth year is almost the same in both sexes, and in all ages above 25 the rate among males is greatly in excess. The abuse of alcohol is undoubt edly one of the potent factors in rendering the male more prone to infection and less amenable to recovery than the female; even the use of alcohol in the treatment of tuberculosis is being gradually discarded by the careful physician of to-day.

Temperance in Eating.

The next great reform of the world, after the liquor and tobacco business is disposed of, will be the debauchery of eating. According to some of the best physicians of the present time, more than three-fourths of all diseases are caused by over-eating or by improper preparation of food. The world has gone on for hundreds of years paying very little real scientific attention to what it puts into its stomach. If it were not for the wonder ful apparatus which nature has furnished and the ability to throw off poisons from the system, it seems as if the whole race would have been exterminated long before this through its carelessness in the matter of its daily means. Probably the one great sin of all unhealthy human beings is the sin of gluttony. According to Mr. Fletcher and others of his school, the haste with which food is taken into the body without chewing and assimilating is criminal in the extreme.

The world seems unable to consider more than one great reforming process at a time, but there is no doubt when the evils from drink and tobacco are eliminated from civilization the whole world will turn its attention to the right kind of food, its right preparation, and then finally its proper assimilation by the eater.

It is, perhaps, perfectly safe to say that more than half of the diseases known to mankind would disappear if the race would learn and obey some of the commonest rules that belong to the use of food

Temperance in the British Navy.

An interesting article has recently been contributed to one of the current British reviews under the title, "The Blessings of Naval Armaments." As one of the blessings the writer points out the influence of the navy as a social and ameliorative institution. The fleet, he states, is one of the most powerful temperance organizations of the day. It is calculated that about 25 per cent. of the men of the fleet abstain altogether from alcoholic liquors, and all the remainder are compelled to be strictly temperate. No officer or man with ambition to rise in the profession can afford to indulge to excess. The daily life at sea in these days of mechanical complication in the control of his majesty's ships is too onerous and exacting for any man who is not of distinctly abstemious habits. Drunkenness, which is not a crime ashore, is a crime in the navy, because temperance is required by the articles of war in the interest, not of the individual, but of the nation.

Trusting All to God.

We find it difficult to believe that Almighty goodness can yet inflict trials on those whom it loves. "Why," we say, "should it please God to make us suffer? Why could he not make us good without making us miserable?" Doubtless he could, for he is all-powerful; the hearts of men are in his hands, and he can turn them as he will. But he who could save manhood, instead of creating them at once in maturity. We have only to be silent and adore his profound wisdom without comprehending it. Thus we see clearly that we cannot be virtuous, but in proportion as we become humble, disinterested, trusting everycern about ourselves.

Expenses, Regulations, Opening Days.

Berea College is not a money-making institution. All the money received from students is paid out for their benefit, and the School expende on an average upon each student about fifty dollars a year more than he pays in. This great deficit is made up by the gifts of Christian and patriotic people who are supporting Berea in order that it may train young men and women for lives of usefulness.

OUR SCHOOL IS LIKE A FAMILY, with careful regulations to protect the character and reputation of the young people. Our students come from the best families and are earnest to do well and improve. For any who may be sick the College provides doctor and nurse without extra charge.

All except those with parents in Berea live in Collego buildings, and assist in work of boarding hall, farm and shops, receiving valuable training, and getting pay according to the value of their labor. Except in win. ter it is expected that all will have a chance to earn as much as 35 cents Some who need to earn more may by writing to the before coming, secure extra employment so as to earn from 50 cents to PERSONAL EXPENSES for clothing, laundry, postage, books, etc., vary with different people. Berea favors plain clothing. Our climate is the best, but as students must attend classes regardless of the weather, warm wraps and underclothing, umbrellas and overshoes, are necessary. The Co-operative Store furnishes books, toilet articles, work uniforms, umbrellas and other necessary articles at cost.

LIVING EXPENSES are really below cost. The College asks no rent for the fine buildings in which students live, charging only enough room rent to pay for cleaning, repairs, fuel, lights, and washing of bedding and towels. For table board, without coffee or extras, $1.35 a week in the fall, and $1.50 in winter. For room, furnished, fuel, lights, washing of bedding, 40 cents a week in fall and spring, 50 cents in winter, SCHOOL FEES are two. First a "Dollar Deposit," as guarantee for return of room key, library books, etc. This is paid but once, and is returned when the student departs.

Second an "Incidental Fee" to help on expenses for care of school build ings, hospital library, etc. (Students pay nothing for tuition or services of teachers-all our instruction is a free gift). The Incidental Fee for most students is $5.00 a term ($4.00 in lower Model Schools, $6.00 in courses with Latin, and $7.00 in Collegiate courses).

PAYMENT MUST BE IN ADVANCE, incidental fee and room rent by the term, board by the half term. Installments are as follows:

WINTER-12 weeks, $29.00,-in one payment $28.50. Installment plan: first day $21.00 (including $1.00 deposit), middle of Faith That Realizes.

It is a faith that realizes its true condition. Bartimeus was a beggar and blind. He had doubtless known better days. The fact that his father, Timeus, is mentioned suggests that his family may have been one of note. He might have come to Christ and commended himself on the ground of his former wealth and position in society. He might have said: "It is true that I am a beggar, but I am not one of the common beggars; there is good blood in my veins. I am proud of my ancestors." There was no masquerading in false finery. He came in the rags of a beggar; he made a beg gar's plea. He was willing to confess what he was.

And until the sinner has that sort of faith in himself he is not apt to have saving faith in Christ. Faith That Inquires.

It is a faith that inquires. Bartimeus heard the stir that Christ was making among the people. There was a crowd surging along the highway after him. FINE BASEBALL GAME

The baseball game Saturday betwee the Whites and the Blues was one of the best attended of the season, altho admission was charged. It seemed to draw almost if not quite as large a crowd, and to provoke fully as much enthusiasm as any of the intercollegiate contests so far. While the score much more equal, and the game was a good one to watch. Thornton, for the Whites, pitched a fine game, allowing about six hits, while fourteen were made off Frost, for the Blues. Frost, however, struck out more men, his chief defect being his inability to throw anything but a curve, even to the basemen. The final score was 10-3 for the Whites. The large attendance did a good deal toward helping out the finances of the Athletic Association, and no one seemed to fee that they had got less amusement than they paid for. Another simlar

Richmond Climax Does Even Better Than Before-Ex-Gov. Beckham Afraid to Comment on the Yarn.

Richmond, Ky., May 6 .- [Special.]-Allen Zarring, a miller, today dedicated his new automobile in an unique cermony. Incidentally Zarring was in great danger for some time and, strangely, it was speeding that saved hic life instead of threatening it.

Zarring went out into the country on business and while he was talking over the deal a big copperhead snake crawled up and snuggled itself in the lar robe on the floor of the machine. When Zarring started home the snake raised its head and showed its fangs to Zarring. Too astonished at first to jump or do anything else, the miller sat inert while the reptile wound itself around his leg and the brake of the auto. Then Zarring got scared. Not realizing what he was doing, he jerked the lever open and let the machine go its best.

The snake moved around a little when the car had attained about its full speed and it's head was within an inch or two of the brake handle. In this position it swayed its head back and forth and thrust out its fangs whenever the man looked as if he were about to make a move.

Zarring has more than ordinary nerve, and after the first shock the snake had given him-which had caused him inadvertently to start the machine in its wild ride-he regained as much composure as the critical situation would admit. Several times he essayed to put the brakes on the car and attempt to leap for his life, but every time he started his hand toward the lever the snake anticipated the action and showed those deadly fangs. So Zarring could do nothing but

'sit tight" and trust to luck. He came through Richmond at full tilt, keeping the middle of the road and his eye on the snake, which every second might strike him. He was afraid to turn his head to beckon help as he shot through the town, but another autoist, in passing, noticed his set face and reversing his machine, started in pursuit to learn what was the matter.

After a two mile chase the runaway was overtaken. When the pursuing automobilist get beside Zarring's machine he saw the miller's predicament. The rescuer acted quickly and effectively. At his side was his cane, a heavy walking stick. This he wielded once, twice, thrice. Each time he hit the snake, and at the third blow the reptile unwound itself and toppled over on the ground, where it was smashed to death under the wheels of Zarring's car.

After Zarring had recovered from his fright he picked up the dead snake, thanked his rescuer and returned to town. He says he will have the reptile mounted by a taxidermist.

A FATAL BOAT RIDE

OCCUPANTS OF CRAFT JUMPED UP WHEN IT DIPPED, CAUSING IT TO CAPSIZE.

NINE PERSONS SWEPT TO DEATH

Whole Family Lost in Swollen Susquehanna River-State Troops Try ing To Recover Bodies, But as Yet All Efforts Have Failed.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 10 .- William Andrews, of Port Griffith, Sunday, took two of his brothers, two cousins, his brother-in-law, his sister and two nephews, a total of nine persons in all, out for a boat ride on the Susquehanna river near his home.

The river is high on account of the recent rains, and the overloaded boat shipped water as soon as it got into the swift current. Some of the people in the boat, growing frightened, stood up, screaming for help, and the next moment the boat capsized.

Before people on shore could overcome their horror and get boats out into the river all of the nine had been carried away by the swift current and disappeared.

Some boys at play on the bank of the river heard the screams for help, but before a boat could be obtained the rowboat, in midstream, had filled with water and sunk.

One of the boys who witnessed the tragedy said Sunday night that the man who was rowing seemed to dip his oars too deep. This, he said, Nearly $30,000,000 is to be expended caused the water to splash over the side of the boat.

The woman, in order to avoid the water, started to move toward the stern of the craft. This shifting of the seas caused the boat to fill rapidly with water.

In a few minutes all were floundering in the rushing river. The two boys Lackawanna is the highest-priced grabbed the clothing of their mother as the boat toppled over and the three disappeared almost instantly.

The river is high and the swift current carried three of the men to within 50 feet of the bank, while the others were drowned within a stone's throw of the scene of the accident.

The names of the dead: Thomas Andrews, Wm. Andrews, Theodore Andrews, Frank Marionosky, Adam Struskus, Frank Ganofky, his wife and two boys, John and Mitchell.

State troops are now trying to re cover the bodies. All of Andrews' eight visitors were from Providence, Lackawanna county.

MURPHY SAYS HE WILL FILE IM-PEACHMENT CHARGES AGAINST JURISTS.

REPEATS CHARGES IN HOUSE

Declares He Will Attempt to Oust Railroad Rate Cases.

Washington .- Mr. Murphy of Missouri, following a speech in the house Thursday, said he would file formal charges of impeachment against Federal Judges McPherson and Philips of the western district of Missouri, whom he accused in a resolution Monday of Incensed over a telegram to Attorney General Wickersham by Frank Hagerman, attorney for 18 railroads, in which Mr. Hagerman characterized Mr. Murphy's resolution of inquiry into the official conduct of the two judges, introduced in the house Monday, as "an outrageous tissue of misrepresentation," Mr. Murphy held the attention of the house with a repetition of the charges.

His colleague, Mr. Rucker, corroborated all that he said in denunciation of the action of the two judges in connection with Missouri's two cent passenger rate law and the maximum freight law. Incidentally Mr. Rucker remarked that Judge Philips ought to have been impeached 20

Mr. Murphy brought the matter up as a question of personal privilege. Mr. Murphy had read some newspaper dispatches to the effect that Hagerman had telegraphed the attorney general of the United States al leging that the charges in the Murphy resolution were "an outrageous tissue of misrepresentation by one who had no knowledge of the facts." He said that he had confirmed the fact that such a telegram had been received by Attorney General Wickersham.

Mr. Clayton of Alabama, a member of the judiciary committee, objected, erature. saving that the argument was not one of personal privilege.

Speaker Cannon ruled that Mr. Murphy was within his rights and could continue, but he had not proceeded far when Mr. Henry of Texas, another member of the judiciary committee, stopped him with an inquiry as to ries. The Missouri member, however, did not give a direct answer, but continued his recital of the charges contained in his resolution.

Several times Mr. Payne, the majority leader, objected, saying Mr. Murphy could not yield for debate. Later he again objected on the ground that Mr. Murphy was traveling outside the issue raised by the Hagerman telegram and the preamble of the res-

Again in passing on the objection,

Continuing, Mr. Murphy denied that the state of Missouri had been accorded every courtesy in the rate cases as was stated in Mr. Hagerman's telegram. The state, he declared, had no knowledge or notice whatever of the first injunction in those cases.

"I am asking the congress of the United States," he said, "to give back to us that government which you handed to us when you admitted us as a state in the union by requiring the federal judiciary in the western district of Missouri to proceed along orderly and decent lines in the execution

Both Judge McPherson and Judge Philips declined to discuss the nouncement that Representative Murphy will ask their impeachment.

News of the destruction was brought to Duluth by the crew of the steamer Northland, who say that as the latter was passing White Fish Point on the way up they discovered wreckage strewn all over the lake and in their opinion it belonged to the Shores. EDUCATING SOUTHWESTERN BLACKS BHILL STATE NEWS Our Readers

Probably no man mbarking on such an enterprise in this country ever faced such depressing difficulties as he did. A salary of $500 a year had been and when he and his wife came to the college building they found a bare, unfurnished structure. There was a roof over it and the four walls, but little else. Birds nestled in the rafters, pigs and goats-the characteristic fauna of suburban Austin-quarreled and rooted and butted and slept in the shelter of the still open base-promised to him.

There was not a stick of furniture in the place. No heat, no light, no beds, no dishes, no chairs, even. To add to these material troubles 83 pupils appeared the first day-before the professor and his wife had had a chance to unlock their trunks. Of this number 41 came from out in the country. They had to be fed and lodged as well as taught. All these young negroes had been carried away by the announcement that had run from lip to lip all through that region that the college was going to open that day.

The new college president's first day was a strenuous one. Probably no other head of a just born university ever saw the like. Some of the students brought small trunks on their shoulders. Others had their possessions in boxes and sacks. The president assembled them in one of the big bare rooms and gave them a brief talk. They sat on their trunks and on the floor. After he had calmed their fears that the college might not be open after all the president left them and set out to get, and get quickly, some of the things that were most needed. The people who lived near the college responded liberally. The president returned with a jug of molasses and 14 loaves of bread, and went back to get a little stove which was the first contribution that was offered him in the first house he went to. This stove, a round, barrel-shaped galvanized iron affair, is still preserved, and treasured, though it is no longer used. They built a fire, for the evening was chill, and seated on the floor, the college president, his wife and the students ate their bread and molasses and were undiscouraged.

That was the beginning—the first lesson that President Lovinggood, who since has become the Booker Washington of the southwest-had in the great art of begging. Every college president, from the biggest universities down to the humbiest, has to be an accomplished beggar. The more money he can get for his college the bigger man he is in the educational world and the better fitted to head a university. By what he has accomplished since Lovinggood has shown that he possesses in a truly remarkable degree this greatest of all the necessary arts—one that stands higher than any in the curriculum-the art of begging.

When the college president and his pupils got up the next morning they found that during the night some vandals had amused themselves by breaking bottles of ink against the walls of the building and defacing them. Windows had been broken and the whole place looked even more desolate than it had at first. But Lovinggood was ûndaunted. He set about getting at once the things he needed most. He begged pennies and nickels and dimes from the negro population of Austin. He organized one "social" after another to get the furniture that was required. The second evening there was a "chair social." People desiring to attend had to bring a chair as a ticket of admission. The college got 37 chairs in this way. A "sheet and pillow case entertainment," a "dish social," a "laundry equipment fair" and a lot of other entertainments to get the supplies they needed followed with the shortest of intervals between. Temporary rooms for dining hall and kitchen were prepared. Aged colored washerwomen came with bedding and made beds ready for students with their own hands.

"Saturday after Saturday," says President Lovinggood, "these women came, each with their small earnings tied in a little piece of cloth, divided them with the school, knelt with me and prayed for the school and went their way. Week after week an aged colored laborer, Richard Woods, came and gave us of his meager earnings. He still comes, and his gifts have amounted already to more than $250."

Such is the history of the beginning of the Samuel Huston college at Austin, Tex.-a school for negro youths. To-day 517 students live and study in a group of handsome buildings. Eleven years ago there was neither school nor scholarsonly the land and the foundation walls. Lovinggood's ability and indomitable courage have wrought the change. It is a history of hardship. He has done even more than to build up a college. His successful solution of the race problem in the center of a cotton section larger than New England, where the colored population is more than million, is printed on every letter and every bit problem. The result of this persistent system Little by little the best people in the town became interested in what was being done in the face of so many difficulties. Vandalism ceased. Now every one in Austin is proud of the colored college. The ablest and best white people there are its warmest friends and supporters.

As an evidence of the good business principles on which the college has been run, and which it has lived up to scrupulously in all its dealings, it is said that the credit of the institution stands so high among the merchants of the town that it practically is good for almost any amount.

"We propose here that the negro shall be honest, industrious and altruistic," says this Booker Washington of the southwest. "We propose to do right. And if we do right, if we be honest, industrious, useful, patriotic citizens, pray tell me what then? Shall the righteous be forsaken and their life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness and all pointed W. H. Green, of Barboursville, seed beg bread? Shall we be denied the rights of that these involve? My faith in the American people compels the statement that all will be well. A good white man and a good black man will get along well together. A correct solution of the race problem depends upon the development of good men and women of both races who will mete out to each other a 'square deal.' It is upon this conception of its proper solution that the efforts of Samuel Huston college to solve the race problem here are based."

But this humble and little known Booker Washington of the southwest is not content with what he has accomplished already. No college presi- within the state at the sanitarium. dent ever is, if he is made of the right stuff. His college is in the great Texas cotton belt, and there institution. are a million negroes who need to be educated in one way or another, according to their capacities and their requirements. He does not contemplate educating them all at once, but he does desire to ville, and Frank Daugherty, of Bardsdo as much as possible, for he argues that the perpetuity of the nation depends not on educating Glasgow, for the democratic nominapart of the people, but all of them-to send out more and more of his students as peacemakers.

His next step is the establishment of an industrial building for boys. An industrial school for girls is in operation already. Lovinggood says they have had to turn away about 800 city and country boys within the last few months-boys who wanted to learn some kind of a trade-because they had no facilities for teaching them. Judging by what he has been able to achieve in the past, there is little doubt he will succeed in this undertaking. When this building is completed and equipped only the fundamental and the simplest trades will be taught there, such as blacksmithing, carpentry, shoemaking, masonry, etc.

Uses of Adder Fat

In picturesque England of the past the adder hunter plied his trade in our woods and forests. The last of the adder hunters died a few years since, Mr. C. J. Cornish, in his book on the New forest, has given us an interesting picture of this Co. The concern is capitalized at worthy, who was known as "Brusher." slung all over with bags of sacking, his pockets were stuffed with tins and boxes, and from his chest hung a pair of long steel forceps. In his hand he carried a light stick with a ferrule, in which when he roused the snake, he put a short forked piece of hazel wood, and, darting it forward with unerring aim, pinned the adder to the ground."

"Brusher" derived a considerable revenue from torneys in connection with alleged prothe sale of "adder's fat," which was regarded by the fessional bondsmen. inhabitants of the New forest as a veritable pharmacopoeia. It was believed to be a remedy for the bite of the snake ,and, according to "Brusher" himself-his real name, by the way, was Millssprains, black eyes, poisoning with brass, bites by rats and horses, rheumatic joints, and sore feet in men and dogs" could all be cured by the applica here in annual conference. tion or this unfailing unguent.

to treat others better than they treat you." That is the rule that every pupil has to try to live up to. Austin is the capital of Texas—a town of about 25,000. About half the population of the town are negroes, and in the country found about they outnumber the whites three to one. For nearly 30 years the colored people in Austin have struggled to establish this school. It is not named after the famous Sam Houston, that historic figure of the great southwest, but after Samuel Huston, a farmer of Marengo, Ia., who long ago gave $9,000 toward the establishment of this college. Six acres of land were purchased, the stone basement of one building was constructed. Then, as usually happens in such cases, the money gave out. This basement stood unfinished in the beating rain and hot sunshine for 16 years, while the colored people struggled to get more money to-The little group that had the school project close to their hearts begged day in and day out, and gathered in not dollars, or even dimes, but nickels and pennies from washerwomen, day laborers and farmers. There is hardly a negro in Austin and the vicinity who has not helped to build this college. In this way $12,000 was collected with infinite toil, and in 1898 the building that had been begun so many years ago was inclosed. And so the struggle went on, year after year. Lovinggood taught by day and whenever he had a moment to spare during his waking hours used it in soliciting aid for his college. The white people took a greater and greater interest in the enterprise when they saw what he was accomplishing. One ex-confederate soldier gave $250. He said that anything that promoted peace and good will between the races was a blessing that ought to be encouraged and expanded. One building after another went up as soon as the first one had been finished. Teacher after teacher was engaged until now there are 17. More than 60 of the pupils have graduated in various professions and are hard at work in the world

Nearly $75,000 in all has been raised and spent in new buildings and improvements during the last ten years. There is the main build-Burrowes hall, which was finished and furnished at a cost of $15,000; a temporary boys' hall was put up for $800; the laundry building cost $1,200; a dormitory was arranged for $1,050; a fine sewer system was installed at a cost of $2,200; a fine brick boys' building has just been completed. It is lighted by electricity and heated with hot air. It cost $19,000. There are a printing outfit, scientific apparatus, a library of 3,090 volumes, five pianos and an organ, a cooking range, 175 iron beds, eight acres of land for a vegetable garden and dairy. The college is absolutely out of debt, pecuniarily, after all this has been accomplished in a material

The college now teaches the English branches. It furnishes its students with a college, a preparatory and a teachers' normal course. Printing and agriculture also are taught. On the domestic side instruction is given in plain sewing, millinery, professional dressmaking, cooking and housekeeping. Religious instruction is one of the features that runs through all the courses.

The college is five blocks from the state capitol. "When the school was opened," says President Lovinggood, "some of the neighboring white people were much grieved, saying that the value of their property would be destroyed. Certain ones passing said ugly words, cut down the shrubbery, broke out the panes and threw ink bottles at the building. THE BEST PAPER FOR YOU IS THE CITIZEN

THE CITIZEN gives you more than the worth of your money, and is growing better all the time. Just compare it with the other newspapers you see. You can get others as cheap, but either they are not as good, or they are not made for the mountains, or they do not give as much. Just look at a few of the things we are giving you now. NEWS-all the news of the world, of this country and of the state that is worth reading. All the news of the mountains that we can get, and more than any other paper gives. All the news of dozens of mountain towns, where correspondents write to us every little CATTLE-All the latest cattle prices, also the prices on ties, and tanbark, and spokes, etc. FARM HINTS—A good column and sometimes more of hints that will help in the work on the farm. HOME HINTS—Good hints on housekeeping by an expert. SCHOOL—A running article on how to teach, to make your school one of the best in the state, by one of the best teachers in the state. THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON—A full column every week. STORIES—A fine, ood, interesting, exciting serial story all the time, and often a good short story a week. TEMPER-ANCE-A column of good reading about temperance. AND OTHER THINGS-You all know how many other good things you get in THE CITIZEN, many of the things that you can't get in any other paper. . . And all for $1.00, the price of lots of poorer papers. That is our best bargain. Don't miss it. Send in your dollar for another year, if your subscription is out.

ALL FOR $1.00

Lots of poorer papers charge as much—other papers as good charge more.

In order to make our offer still more attractive, we arrange to give subscribers bargains with their paper. We used to give some of these things away, but we have made the paper so much better that we cannot afford to do that any more. You can get all these things with THE CITIZEN cheaper than any where else, and besides get a better paper than you can get any where else. These are

No. 1:—That Citizen Knife. Most of you know it. It is the finest premium that was ever offered with any paper. It will cost you 75 cents at a store, but you can get it with THE CITIZEN for 25 cents extra. The knife, 75 cents, the CITIZEN $1.00, both worth $1.75, for $1.25.
No. 2:—The Farmers Rapid Colculator, a thirty five cent book that is worth several dollars to any up to date farmer. It tells what you want to know about almost anything on the farm. It is a good book on diseases of horses, cattle, sheep, and hogs; tells you how to know what is the matter and what to do. It gives figures, tells you how to reckon interest if you have borrowed or loaned money, or how many bushels of corn there are in a load that weighs so much, or how to measure the corn in a crib, or in a pile, and how much seed it takes to plant an acre, or how many brick to build a chimney and lots of things of that kind. And it has places for you to keep account of your expenses and earnings, and of what you bought and sold, and anything else you want to remember. If you are a farmer, it is just the thing you want. The Calculator 35 cents. The Citizen $1.00. Both, worth, $1.35 for $1.10.

No. 3:--- The National Handy Package, Just the thing your wife has been looking for. Needles and pins of all kinds. More than a quarter's worth, but it usually sells for a quarter. We sell it with The Citizen for ten cents. Handy Package, 25 cents, The Citizen $1.00. Both, worth, $1.25 for $1.10.

No. 4:--- A book, "The Mountain People of Kentucky." By William H. Haney a mountain man, telling the history and the present condition of the mountains as he sees them. The book is worth $1.50, but we will sell it with The Citizen for 50 cents. The book, $1.50, The Citizen $1.00. Both, worth $2.50 for

No. 5:—Another book, "Jesus of Nazareth." A fine life of Christ, by the Rev. Dr. William E. Barton. A fine book, in beautiful binding, with 350 illustrations, an ornament to any home, and a good book to read. The usual price is $2.50, but we sell it for $1.00. The book $2.50, The Citizen $1.00. Both, worth $3.50

You can get one of these with your Citizen.

They are easy to get. Just write to The Citizen, Berea, Ky. Tell us that you want to renew. say what premium you want, and send correct amount of money. Write your name and address plainly The best way to send the money is by post-office money order. Get one from the postmaster. You can also send your check.

OR YOU CAN GO TO OUR AGENTS.

We have a lot of them, and they can take subscriptions, and send your name and money, and most of them can give you the premiums. If they haven't them, we will send them to you as soon as we get your money. No premiums are sent till the money is paid. If you want to do that, go to one of these
